from the executive director

I am an avid e-book reader. Don't get me wrong, I swoon over physical books but there is something about always having a "book" on me that I find comforting. (Yes, I read on my phone. It's pretty big). Since e-books and recently, e-audiobooks, are my go-to I absolutely LOVE having free access to Libby and Hoopla through the library. That said, as a 2 books per week reader, I am frequently frustrated at the lack of e-books available and the long waits. And don't get me started about the number of incomplete series. Especially when Book #1 isn't even available. Being that I work in a library I know why this occurs, but many people do not. And it's something that all libraries that offer e-books struggle with.

Libraries want to give their patrons what they want; we wish to fulfill every reader's needs but our hands (budgets) are tied.

There is no doubt that e-books offer convenience and accessibility, however, their availability through libraries is often fraught with restrictions imposed by publishers.

One major issue is cost. Unlike physical books, which libraries can purchase outright and lend indefinitely, e-books are often subject to pricey licensing agreements. Many publishers charge libraries significantly more for digital titles than consumers pay, and these licenses frequently expire after a set number of checkouts or a specific period—forcing libraries to repurchase popular books repeatedly.

Another issue is limited access. Some publishers refuse to sell new e-books to libraries immediately upon release, delaying availability by months. This frustrates library readers and diminishes the library's role in providing free and equitable access to information.

Usage restrictions also hinder libraries. Digital lending is governed by strict rules, often limiting the number of or not allowing simultaneous checkouts.

Finally, ownership concerns complicate matters. Libraries do not truly "own" e-books—they lease them under temporary contracts. If a publisher decides to pull a title from circulation, libraries lose access entirely. So while you may be discouraged with how long you have to wait or the limited amount of e-book titles we offer, it is not because we do not want to give our readers what they want. Paying significantly more for e-books than consumers and dealing with licenses that expire after a set time or number of checkouts presents us with many challenges, but our goal is to make digital content more accessible and the process less frustrating. And libraries are working hard to make digital content more accessible and affordable so that we can fulfill our mission of providing you free access to literature, information, technology, nature, and the arts.

Warmly,

Brigitte S. Hopkins
Executive Director

adult services

Have you ever wondered what a typical day in the Adult Services department entails? To be sure, things come up every day that can derail plans or ongoing projects, but there are essential tasks that get done every single day. Our Adult Services Associates are an integral part of the team who keep things moving. Each day, they run a holds list and pull books that are to be sent to patrons who have requested them from other libraries. Occasionally that list can be well over one hundred items! Another key responsibility is to reshelve the items that have been returned or have been reviewed by patrons in the library. Cataloging magazines so they are ready to be shelved is an additional routine duty performed by our associates.

These tasks are just a portion of our associates' responsibilities. Others include shelf reading to ensure that items are accurately shelved so that they can be easily accessed. Creating book displays is a fun aspect of the job. Sometimes the displays are randomly chosen like cooking, or true crimes while others are themed around an event or program that may be upcoming. This is only a small portion of all they do in their job as Adult Services Associates. Our operations would not be possible without the dedication of our associates, and we are very grateful for the hard work they do in helping to keep the library running!

Participate in one of our clubs or meetups. Join other community members while doing something you love, or learning something new!

Without question, WLWP has employed a great deal of individuals since our doors opened in 1894. So many have left a positive impact on our organization as well as a legacy within the community. We are always grateful when images of the past are shared with us, and in turn we are able to share with you!

Special thanks goes out to James Cole for providing us these fantastic images of his grandfather, James Brown (top and middle). And to Johanna Marshall who provided us an incredible photo of her aunts in Wilcox Park (bottom).

James Brown, worked for Westerly Library & Wilcox Park as Park Superintendent from the mid 1940's for nearly 20 years.

James said: "My Grandfather was born in Scotland and attended Kew Gardens to learn gardening skills. He came to America around 1910 and was employed at various estates in the Newport area. He later went to the Sales Estate in Pawtucket, then to Wilcox Park."

West DeRocco Woolley (far right) with her two sisters. Mrs. West DeRocco Woolley was a Children's Librarian at Westerly Library from approximately 1925-1935. She left a wonderful and impactful bequest upon her passing in 1997 to be added to the John & Anna DeRocco book fund that she and her sister started almost 20 years prior. This generous bequest still contributes to our annual book fund.

public services

Our Circulation area received a spruce up! We have moved our self-check kiosks, charging locker, and catalog computer. The catalog computer is now located in between the two “welcome” pillars in front of the circulation desk. Now you’ll find two self-checkouts adjacent to the curved wall, alongside our accessible charging locker, just inside our side entrance. Our self-checkouts are easy to use if you’re in a hurry, and perfect for kids who want to scan their own library card and books. You’ll need your PIN so if you’ve forgotten it or haven’t yet set one up, visit the circulation desk for assistance. These changes are designed to make your experience in the library simpler and help you find the perfect book!

At WLWP we celebrate our dedicated staff members monthly. Colleagues are nominated for going above and beyond by their peers. Atta•dudes, as we call them, are awarded to the staff member who receives the most nominations in a month. Anna was our winner of March’s atta•dude!

Anna was recognized for all her contributions made toward the Caddy Stack fundraiser. They include working extra hours to set-up for the event, managing the check-in table, and assisting with all preparations for a successful event.

Head of Youth Services

WLWP is thrilled to announce that Melanie Fricchione has been appointed as the new Head of Youth Services, effective March 2025.

Mel joined the library in October 2022 as the Kids Librarian, where she quickly established herself as a dedicated advocate for creativity, collaboration, and community engagement. Over the past few years, she has developed a strong connection with Westerly families, encouraging young minds to explore their creative side through innovative arts and crafts programming such as Playdough Playtime, Natural Arts, and Kids Craft Time.

As she steps into her new role, Mel is eager to build upon her successes by expanding youth programs and strengthening community outreach. She envisions bringing library services out into the community while also welcoming families into the library to discover everything it has to offer.

With her passion for fostering imagination and lifelong learning, Melanie is excited about the future of Youth Services at Westerly Library & Wilcox Park. She looks forward to developing fresh, engaging experiences that inspire children to learn, create, and explore in new ways. Congratulations, Mel!

Undertale
Recommended by Ben
If this game hasn't been spoiled for you yet, do yourself a favor and just play it before looking up anything else. This one-man project that took the world by storm in 2015 still gets the same amount of laughs and emotional tears as ten years ago, especially if you're a seasoned gamer who can recognize the tropes that get completely turned on their head.

Pokemon Mystery Dungeon: Rescue Team DX
Recommended by Ben
This time, you are the Pokemon! This light dungeon crawler uses random dungeons and great music to make an experience different from the mainline Pokemon games, but still a fun way to spend some time.

Kids Librarian

The Youth Department has been blossoming with new beginnings! We are excited to announce that Julianna Risica will be starting this month as our new Kids Librarian! You may have already met Julianna in her previous role as our Program and Outreach Associate. Julianna was born and raised in Rhode Island and has spent many sunny days in Wilcox Park as a child. She even has a picture of herself on our beloved Runaway Bunny statue. In her free time, she enjoys reading, sketching and drawing outdoors, and playing the ukulele. We are so excited to see Julianna grow in her new position!

Recommended by Orson
Explore all the definitions of love with your friends from Sesame Street! In this illustrated picture book, children will [see] their favorite characters share what love means to them.

Roadwork by Sally Sutton
Recommended by Daisy
There are many big machines and busy people involved in building a road, and this picture book, with its rambunctious rhymes and noisy fun, follows them every step of the way, from clearing a pathway to rolling the tar to sweeping up at the end.

Many volunteers participated in our Annual Earth Day clean out of the pond. This year 17 volunteers from Westerly Land Trusts' Coffee, Clearing and Conversation Club participated including Executive Director, Jen Fusco and Crew Leader Marc Doherty. Over 3,000 pounds of debris was removed, the aquatic plants were tended to and the concrete coping was powerwashed. (left bottom and top)

Alan Peck, Park Supintendent, participated in the Annual State Street School STREAM Week Community Readers event.
